Lewis County: Drinking water advisory ends for Pe Ell residents

OLYMPIA — Residents of Pe Ell in Lewis County no longer have to boil their drinking water. The town's water has been tested, and results show the water is safe to drink.

A health advisory was issued Friday, July 20, after a construction accident broke a large water main, causing most of the town's 1,300 residents to lose water pressure for about two hours. When water pressure is lost, contaminants that can cause illness can be drawn into water lines.

Customers who have questions can call 360-324-2132.
